

SEMINAR ANNOUNCEMENT

Employment injuries can be devastating for employees and employers alike. Employees suffer painful injuries and lose essential income. Employers operate short-handed and take a financial hit – either through increased insurance premiums or as a self-insurer.

Learn how to successfully maneuver through the minefield of workers' compensation and minimize the gravity of these potential consequences. In this educational seminar, experienced attorney Elliot K. Morris of the Workers Compensation Fund will give you tools to survive the workers' compensation process. Topics to be covered include:

- Essential to-dos before an injury occurs
- Steps to take immediately after an employee is injured
- Strategies to handle complex issues that arise while an employee is being treated, such as time off needs, modified duty, and FMLA/ADA implications
- Tips for successfully managing the claim - what you and your carrier should be doing
- Best practices for closing claims and getting employees back to work
- Methods to control workers' compensation claims costs – and protect the company's bottom line

Who should attend: Any company leader involved with workers' compensation matters at your company, including human resource professionals, safety managers, and other management officials.
